

In an unassuming garage at a quiet dwelling in the historical village of Whitehouse, something remarkable is happening to benefit area high school softball hitters.

Leon Woods, father of former All-Ohio softball player Jenn Woods, is successfully educating up-and-coming high school talent with the nation's hottest virtual instruction hitting program. Through his MVP Hitting Solutions home business, Woods uses RightView Pro and produces an uncanny number of the top hitters among the area's strongest softball programs.

Leon brought his wisdom to Northwest Ohio softball after discovering it at an area clinic hosted by area softball influence Bruce Edwards in 2004. Woods is now considered a member of the staff for the RightView Pro Company based in Southern California. His pupils come from as far away as Cincinnati and the Flint, Mich., area, ranging from individuals to entire teams, high school to college, softball and baseball.

Leon is probably the most influential coach and teacher many of the area softball hitters has had. I say teacher because he not only is a hitting coach but he believes in being a well rounded individual and having other things in your life in order, that allows you to excel in sports. Not only is he one of the best hitting coaches around, kids walk out of his lessons with confidence and poise. Leon is truly a gem in the softball community here in Northwest Ohio and we're proud to welcome him as a member of the FAST Wizard Softball organization.
